Curis Health Management, LLC

Chigozie (“Chazie”) Nnabue is a Managing Partner and Co-Founder of Curis Health Management, where he provides executive oversight focused on operations, compliance, and strategic growth across healthcare staffing and community-based services.

Chazie brings more than two decades of leadership experience in highly regulated environments, with a professional background in operations management, compliance oversight, documentation standards, and client advocacy. Throughout his career in financial services, he held senior leadership roles overseeing multi-location teams, implementing internal controls, and ensuring adherence to complex regulatory requirements.

At Curis Health Management, Chazie applies this operational discipline to support healthcare staffing services and DDA-related programs, helping to build processes that promote consistency, accountability, and quality across all service lines. His responsibilities include supporting operational systems, strengthening compliance practices, and fostering strong relationships with healthcare partners, community stakeholders, and internal leadership.

Chazie works collaboratively with executive, program, and supervisory staff to ensure Curis Health Management delivers services that are responsive, ethical, and aligned with both healthcare industry standards and community-based service expectations. His approach emphasizes teamwork, clear communication, and long-term organizational stewardship.

Chazie resides in Northern Baltimore County with his wife and three daughters. He is actively involved in the community and is committed to Curis Health Management’s mission of delivering dependable healthcare staffing and meaningful, person-centered support services.
